Measles is a highly contagious disease. The Health Dept. recommends that anyone who visited any of the above locations during the specified date/time should contact a health care provider immediately to discuss potential exposure and risk of developing the illness. If you have not been vaccinated or have not had the measles, you are at risk if exposed.

Measles symptoms include rash, high fever, cough, runny nose and red, watery eyes. Serious complications from measles can include pneumonia and encephalitis (swelling of the brain). In pregnant women, measles can lead to miscarriage, premature birth or low-birth weight baby. Measles are spread from coughing, sneezing or any contact with mucus or saliva from an infected individual.
